

Reviews

Bunny Drop (うさぎドロップ)

One Fine Day meets The Pursuit of Happyness

A moving story about how a grandson steps up to take care of his late grandfather's six year old love child. Predictable? Expected fairytale ending? Not at all.... Outstanding performances from the entire cast makes it real, believable and unexpectedly enjoyable.

A heartwarming movie about a nephew who takes on the responsibility of taking care of his auntie...who is 6 years old. Is he crazy or even capable of doing this task, Daikichi definitely finds out when he is confronted with the difficulties of raising a child. The acting skills from Rin who plays the six year old is absolutely amazing, her character and performance steals and warms Daikichi's and your heart as well!

Jovita

Esther

It is a wonderful story. Daikichi's parenting and sacrifices for his late grandfather's six years old little child is heart-warming. I love Bunny Drop and look forward to Bunny Drop Movie II.

Edwin

Starting parenting of a child turns our hero into a truly responsible person, in this case by choice. Daikichi steps up to foster the lone child for unknown consequences and burden. In real life this impulsive decision seems unlikely to many. But I am sure many would be moved by this nice guy's right choice, at the right moment. Terrific performance.

Jackie

BUNNY DROP

Genre: Drama / Director: Sabu

Cast: Kenichi Matsuyama, Mana Ashida, Karina

Language: Japanese

Subtitles: English; (English and Chinese TBC)

Rating: G (Japan), PG (MPAA)

Theatrical Release: August 20, 2011 (Japan)

Inflight Release: Oct 2011 cycle

Run Time: 115 min (Theatrical); TBC (Edited)

Territories: Worldwide ex-Japan

Festival: Golden Goblet nominee, Shanghai IFF (Jun 2011)

an encore experience